The Murder of Community Activists in Colombia

Justice for Colombia

962 Activists KILLED

in four years in Colombia

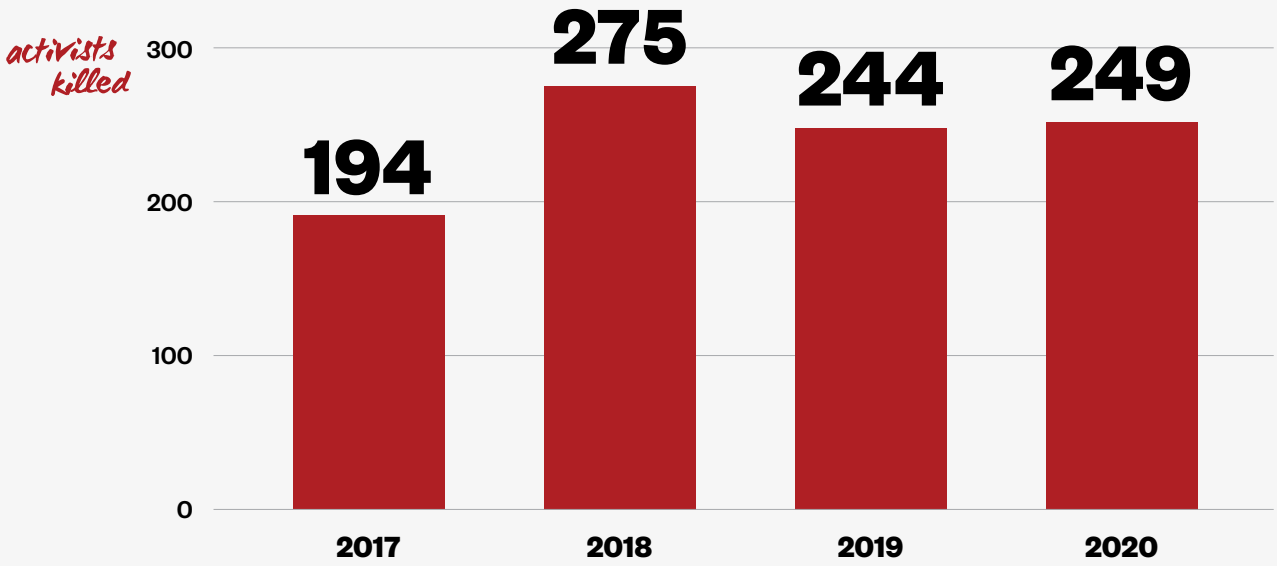
On average
240 activists are killed every year,
more than four every week.



Silenced

The Murder of Community Activists in Colombia

The cost of activism in Colombia

Community activists in Colombia face horrendous levels of violence.

Trade union, peasant, African-Colombian, indigenous, women's rights, LGBTQ, environmental activists and many more are all targeted.

Lack of response from the state

The Colombian government has failed to provide adequate protection for those risking their lives to defend human rights.

The vast majority of killings take place in rural areas historically neglected by the Colombian state.

Implementation of peace agreement

The 2016 peace agreement addresses both the structural causes of violence and the dismantling of paramilitary groups.

The Colombian government has not implemented the agreement anywhere near sufficiently and so the killings have continued.

What do the activists say in Colombia's most violent regions?

"We are asking for political action so that human rights activism in Colombia is neither a crime nor a death sentence."

Olga Quintero

Olga Quintero is a member of the ASCAMCAT peasant farmers' association based in Catatumbo, northeast Colombia. ASCAMCAT organises rural communities to defend their land, the environment and human rights.

"We will give our unconditional support to the peace process from beginning to end."

Darnelly Rodríguez

Darnelly Rodríguez is a member of the REDFIC human rights organisation based in Valle del Cauca, southwest Colombia. REDFIC promotes the protection of human rights through working with trade unions and local communities, including supporting victims of state and paramilitary abuses.

What can you do to help?

- Affiliate your branch or as an individual to JFC
- Contact your political representative about the situation in Colombia
- Move motions in your trade union to support Colombian community activists
- Follow JFC on social media and inform others about Colombia
- Invite JFC to talk at trade union meetings and other events

What does JFC do?

- Highlight the situation for community activists in Colombia
- Mobilise political support in British and Irish parliaments
- Promote solidarity from the British and Irish trade union movements
- Provide permanent support to community activists on the front line in Colombia
